Joseph Judd 1849-1929

JOSEPH JUDD, Sheriff, son of Samuel and Catherine Haynes, was born in Birmingham, England, February 2, 1849. He came to Utah with his mother and family, four sons and four daughters, in 1864, the father coming in 1862. Two girls and one boy died on the way, the others crossed the plains in Warren's, Kimball's and Lawrence's ox trains. He and his brother Thomas drove ox teams, walking all the way. They located in St. George, Joseph learning the carpenter and stair-builder's trade and becoming a prominent mechanic.

He was one of the foremen in building the St. George Temple and a contractor and merchant at Silver Reef, where he made the coffin for "Dutch Jake," the first man who died there. He was Deputy Sheriff of Washington County for several years and active in suppressing the Silver Reefs trike in 1881. In 1884 he came to Manti and assisted in constructing the magnificent spiral stairs in the temple. He was foreman in erecting the Garfield Beach resort and the architect's superintendent in constructing the famous Saltair Beach, and foreman in building several prominent houses of Salt Lake City. He worked at his trade in this Manti and served as Justice of the Peace.

In 1804 he was appointed Probate Judge by President Cleveland and held the office until it was abolished in 1896. He was elected Sheriff in November, 1896. In company with Alexander Tennant and Nephi Ottosen he managed the Manti Lumber Company. He also managed the Manti Creamery. He was a charter member of the A.O.U.W. and a past master workman.
