

OLIVE BLEAK SNOW

Mrs. Olive Bleak Snow, wife of Joseph S. Snow, was born, November 29, 1872, and reared in St. George, Utah, the daughter of James G. and Jane Thompson Bleak.

She is a graduate of the St. George schools having attended these institutions when under the jurisdiction of the church.

She was married on March 22nd in the St. George Temple to Joseph S. Snow. Had she lived until the 22nd of this month she would have been married forty-one years.

To Mr. Snow and her family she was a wonderful wife and mother, to her neighbors she was the finest neighbor one could find. One who knew her well states that she was always willing to assist in any way in the time of trouble or sickness. A woman who lived up to the zenith of that wonderful something known as "a good neighbor—a friend in need."

While Mrs. Snow was quiet and unassuming, those who knew her state that she was a fine worker in both church and civic activities. She did not hunt the spot light but was the one who helped to put things across and although many did not realize the extent of her interests she has left many monuments to her good work behind.

Mrs. Snow was born in the L. D. S. Church and has been a firm believer in its teachings and had a fine understanding of religion to base her faith on.

Surviving her are her husband, Joseph S. Snow, Rex B. Snow, of Joseph S. Snow, and the following children: Rex B. Snow, of Salt Lake City; Inez S. Moody, of Delta; and Glenn E. Snow, of Parowan; Grant B. Snow, of Overton, Nevada, and Rosamond Snow, who is in the hospital recovering from the explosion.
